

God's good earth?

A poem written by the children in Hedgehogs' class

A June sunrise hovers above,
The majestic sky filling with joy and hope for the new day
Souls lighting up as they embrace the fresh air.
Around the world, God's beauty can be seen
Dew drops covering the small snow-coloured petals
Delicate daisies fill hearts with gratitude and amazement
Silver roses reflect up to the misty clouds
Sun coloured sand covering vast, open deserts
In rainforests, leaves swaying majestically on the sepia branches
With pure platinum clouds drifting over the towering trees,
Waves crashing in the crystal blue ocean
It is a privilege to be on His planet
With hearts filled with joyfulness - about to explode
His world is filled with excitement and happiness
His world is filled with love and beauty.

But Humans have changed that.
Factories producing toxic fumes
Icebergs melting away like the happiness in our hearts.
Rainforests dying - habitats destroyed.
Plastic bags being littered in the water, killing our sea-life.
But surely it wasn't our fault?
Evil humans burning forests until there is nothing left except stone and ash.

Foul humans using gas and petrol catching the animals' lungs and strangling them to death.

Discarding litter at every opportunity

Forgetting to recycle

Horrifying human beasts destroying God's Earth

And now dread fills our veins when we realise that we ARE that monster!

Feeling horrible, feeling bad, we are a disappointment to Him.

His beautiful world is turning ugly because we are throwing it all away

How have we not realised how evil we have been?

WE need to stop. We are fools.

We need to stop being the problem.

We need to stop now!

But hope is still in the air. All is not lost.

We can still fix this.

We need to stop pollution

Otherwise this WILL happen

We must respect His world

Stop the deforestation

Stop putting rubbish in the ocean

We don't care how long it takes, we are going to save the planet

Be a good person and do this.

Be the person God created and save the world he gave to us.
